

When we tell our story
it's about another person.
We stand to our side
and recite our biography.
It is as if we were
stranded on the beach,
the tide receded.
But we don't mind
being separate from ourselves.
We are less encumbered.
We can look, and print
and laugh
and go on our way.

May 15 2001